Next CCCA Meetings

We have several ideas in mind for our fall meetings but have not settled yet on a date or topic. At least two important issues will come up at the County Board meeting September 22 and 25: JBG's plans for Crystal Square and a VRE update on station design. It's likely we will not schedule a meeting until the end of September or beginning of October, depending on issues. More information will be provided later.

Uber/Lyft Parking Lot on S. Eads Street

The three civic associations of 22202—CCCA, Aurora Highlands, and Arlington Ridge—have been engaged with County Transportation on the traffic problems caused by the new Uber/Lyft parking lot for the airport between route 1 and S. Eads Street. Although there is no objection to the parking lot itself, the single entry/exit on S. Eads Street is causing considerable traffic problems. We asked the County to reopen the entry/exit on route 1 and close off S. Eads Street, but were told that this is a VDOT issue. Given the increasing problems with cut-through traffic and unsafe drivers in a hurry to get to the airport for their rides, we do not find this an acceptable excuse. We will continue to follow up with the County and escalate our concerns. Please email us if you have examples of traffic and bad driving that you have witnessed on S. Eads Street:

Long Bridge Facility Ground Breaking

In the midst of a downpour, the groundbreaking for the Facility Center at Long Bridge Park took place on July 24. We will look forward to an update on construction in the near future.

Very little about the effort to build an aquatics center at Long Bridge Park has ever been easy — and that includes the project's long-awaited groundbreaking. Mother Nature had one last obstacle in store for county leaders as they gathered to finally turn some dirt at Long Bridge, delivering a formidable deluge that thoroughly soaked the construction site ahead of Tuesday's ceremonial start to construction. Yet even as the rain turned the ground to mush and tested the limits of attendees' umbrellas, Arlington officials pressed on with a celebration of a project that's been decades in the making. "This project has endured worse than a little rain," joked County Board Chair Katie Cristol. Read more here. See a video rendering here.

County Renews Long-Stymied Efforts to Find Long Bridge Park Aquatics Center Sponsors

County officials haven't given up hope that they might someday find corporate sponsors for the Long Bridge Park aquatics center, in order to offset some of the costs of the controversial project. With work on the $60 million facility formally kicking off this week, the county is also moving closer to hiring a marketing firm to help it recruit potential partners for Long Bridge. Officials hope to start soliciting bids from companies before the year is out. The project has had its fair share of financial challenges over the years, with substantial cost overruns prompting the County Board to postpone its construction in 2014. All throughout the process, however, county staff have kept hope alive that a naming rights sponsor or some other corporate partner might step in to help make the pool a bit more affordable for Arlington taxpayers moving forward.

Demolition of Clark/15th Streets Overpass

Demolition of the Clark Street structure above 15th Street South was completed July 27. Westbound 15th Street at Clark Street and Route 1 reopened. See photos of the demolition

Demolition of the Clark Street roadway will continue behind the current work zone barriers and will not affect drivers or pedestrians. The next detours will occur during removal of the Clark Street bridge over 18th Street South.

This work has not yet been scheduled, but there will be a two-week advance notice before the detour starts. Visit the project page

S. Eads Street Construction Set to Snarl Traffic Near Pentagon Parking

Construction around one of the Pentagon's parking lots could produce some big headaches for drivers and bus riders alike. Starting July 16, work shut down the west side of S. Eads Street from Army Navy Drive to where it nears the Pentagon's south parking lot at S. Rotary Road. That shifts both northbound and southbound traffic to the east side of the street. In the mornings, from 6 a.m. to 9 a.m., that cuts off access to I-395's northbound HOV lanes and Army Navy Drive from S. Rotary Road. Crews have posted a detour and drivers should follow signs. In the same time period, access to northbound S. Eads Street from the right lane of S. Rotary Road is reserved for anyone heading for I-395's southbound HOV lanes. Construction includes "median reconfiguration, road widening, pavement and drainage work," according to VDOT, prompting some major traffic snarls. Read more here.

With Redevelopment Nearing, Several Crystal City Shops Set to Relocate

Multiple restaurants and stores are either closing or relocating in the Crystal City Shops at 1750.

Potbelly Sandwich Shop, one of the departing tenants, will be closed after today (July 25). A sign inside the restaurant says they are relocating to an existing Potbelly location in Alexandria (401 John Carlyle Street), and a manager said the Crystal City location is closing because the building managers are renovating.

King Street Blues closed for business July 29. Crystal Cleaners has moved to 1235 S. Clark Street under the name Crystal Gateway Cleaners. Crystal City Dental

Arts Center also plans to move to that location at the end of the month. JBG Smith operates the Crystal City Shops, with a main entrance at 1750 Crystal Drive, and the 1235 S. Clark Street site. A Touch of Art & Framing will relocate to a different space within the 1750 complex July 31, according to a sign on its door. Read more here. Also, La-Or Nail and Skin is moving next to the Ship Hatch near Rite Aid and FedEx-Kinkos is moving to the former Tech Shop area which is empty.

Future Cities Project

The Crystal City Business Improvement District (BID) is embarking on a multi-dimensional strategic planning process called the Future Cities Project. This effort will focus on Crystal City, Pentagon City, and Potomac Yard – Arlington. These three areas represent, individually and collectively, major economic centers of Arlington County, the Greater Washington region, and the Commonwealth of Virginia. ### County May Ask State for $78 Million for Second Crystal City Metro Entrance

Arlington is getting ready to seek nearly $78 million in state transportation funding to build a second entrance at the Crystal City Metro station. The County Board is considering submitting the project for "Smart Scale" funding, money handed out by the Commonwealth Transportation Board for big-ticket projects around the state. If approved, Arlington would have the money it needs to add an eastern entrance to the station at the northwest corner of the intersection of Crystal Drive and 18th Street S., perhaps by sometime in 2024.

Arlington's recent budget woes, brought on by declining commercial tax revenues and new funding obligations for Metro service, means that the county will need to rely on outside funding for the second entrance. The county expected to get most of that money from the Northern Virginia Transportation Authority, a regional body that funds major transportation improvements.

But the NVTA recently told the county that it can only chip in about $5 million towards design work for the project, as the group adjusts its own funding plans after losing out on tens of millions in annual revenue as a result of a deal to provide dedicated funding to Metro.

That forced Arlington officials to turn to the statewide “Smart Scale” program to for funding, an outcome local lawmakers predicted as a result of the NVTa losing out on money as part of the Metro deal. The county is similarly concerned about how it might pay for second entrances at the Ballston and East Falls Church stations in the coming years due to these same factors, but officials only chose to submit the Crystal City project for “Smart Scale” money. Read more here.

State transportation officials will evaluate the Crystal City entrance against other projects across the state, and award funding based on factors like how much congestion they will relieve and how much economic development they’ll spur. Should Arlington win the full $78 million it’s asking for, county officials plan to use the NVTa money and some local tax revenue to fund the remainder of the project’s cost, according to a staff report.

Voters in Crystal City now have a new polling place

As we have noted before, the County has entered into an agreement with JBG Smith to relocate more permanently the voting precinct for the northern part of Crystal City, precinct 006.

The County Board approved a change for voters living in the “Crystal City 006 Precinct,” which runs from the intersection of 18th Street S. and S. Fern Street up along Route 1 before it meets I-395, at its meeting Saturday, July 14. The Gallery Underground (2100 Crystal Drive) once served as the polling place for the precinct, but it’s now located in a conference room inside a building at 251 18th Street S. The county only recently moved the polling place for the precinct, which contains roughly 6,000 voters, after some nearby apartment buildings backed out of plans to host voters instead.

This latest change was spurred by “several complaints from voters in the north part of the precinct about the change, mostly in regards to parking,” according to a staff report prepared for the County Board. The county will now send out postcards to any voters impacted by the change ahead of the Nov. 6 election. Read more here.

Police Investigating String of Car Burglaries Around Arlington Ridge

Arlington police have arrested one man in connection with a string of overnight car burglaries in Arlington Ridge, and another burglar may still be at large. An anonymous tipster told ARLnow that police left a variety of notes on car windshields around the 1000 block of 18th Street S. warning owners to check the vehicles to see if anything was amiss. Police are asking anyone whose vehicle might’ve been broken into to call the department at 703-558-2222. Read more here.

APS Reveals 11 Elementary Schools Set for Boundary Changes This Winter

Arlington’s School Board is laying out more details as it prepares to redraw elementary school boundary lines this fall, identifying 11 schools set to see boundary changes ahead of the 2019 school year. With the new Alice West Fleet Elementary School set to open in Arlington Heights next year, Arlington Public Schools needs to tweak boundaries for a variety of schools as ripple effects of the change spread throughout the county. The Board’s already been busy working with staff to sort out which schools should be “option” programs, accessible to students around the county, and plans to spend the next few months sorting out remaining boundary details leading up to a final vote this December. While school leaders have discussed a variety of programs over the course of the year, today (Friday) Arlington Public Schools released the final list of elementary schools set to have their boundaries changed as part of this process. Oakridge is one of these.

But staff don't plan to offer any final recommendations until sometime this fall, and will only do so after holding a series of public meetings on the process. Staff will hold an open office hours session on the issue from 7-8:30 p.m. on Aug. 7 and the first community meeting on the topic on Sept. 26, both at Kenmore Middle School (200 S. Carlin Springs Rd.). The Board plans to take a final vote on boundaries Dec. 6. Read more here.

County Board Approves Water Pollution Control Plant's Solids Master Plan

The Arlington County Board today approved a Solids Master Plan for the Water Pollution Control Plant's (WPCP), culminating a two-year public process to determine upgrades for handling the plant's biosolids. These solids are separated from wastewater in the treatment process before the highly-cleaned wastewater is released into Four Mile Run, a short distance from the Potomac River. ### Arlington Libraries Abandon Some Digital Offerings to Cut Costs

Arlington's public library system is rolling back some of its digital offerings as it seeks to cope with deep budget cuts. Library officials announced Monday (July 16) that patrons soon won't be able to access both Standard & Poor's Capital IQ Netadvantage, an investment research tool, and Hoopla, a system for streaming music or audiobooks. Both services were previously available free of charge for library users. This move comes after the library system spent the last few weeks collecting feedback on what services patrons value, in order to prepare for the loss of $250,000 in funding that took effect with the start of the new fiscal year on July 1. Library officials say they received more than 19,500 responses to that survey, which helped inform these cuts. Read more here.

Kids, Parents Plan Lemonade Stands Around Arlington to Help Separated Immigrant Families

Ordinarily, it wouldn't be big news that some kids and their parents plan to sell some lemonade around Arlington on a late-July day — but the lemonade stands popping up around the county this weekend come with a bit more of a message than most. Activists with the group "Lawyer Moms of America" set up several stands in Arlington and other locations around Northern Virginia July 28 (Saturday), as part of a national demonstration dubbed "Kids Take a Stand." Parents and kids alike plan to use the event to raise money to hasten the reunification of families separated at the Mexican border. While the Trump administration has managed to reunite roughly 1,400 children, from ages 5 to 17, with their families ahead of a court-imposed deadline, hundreds of other kids remain in government custody without any connection to their parents. Read more here.

Arlington Preparing to Embrace Dockless Vehicles With Pilot Program

Arlington is now gearing up to officially embrace dockless bikes and scooters, even though some scooters have already arrived in the county. County officials have spent the last few weeks mulling how to respond to the sudden appearance of dozens of Bird's dockless scooters around Arlington in late June. Though the county did receive some advance warning from the company that it planned to start operating in Arlington, County Manager Mark Schwartz and the county's legal team weren't sure exactly how to react to Bird's arrival.

Some communities have even chosen to take legal action against dockless vehicle companies that start operating without the local government's consent, but the county announced in a statement today (Thursday) that staff determined there "are no regulations currently in place that would prohibit the operation and use of these devices in Arlington." The county doesn't have any regulation prohibiting the scooters on sidewalks, but it does ban "motorized vehicles" from county bike paths, which would include the scooters. Moving forward, county transportation spokesman Eric Balliet told ARLnow that officials are planning to unveil a "pilot demonstration project" to test out all manner of dockless vehicles this fall. ### Real Estate Tax Break Program for Seniors Set to Change Next Year

Some changes are on the way for Arlington's real estate tax relief program for seniors, though officials declined pursue the sort of sweeping overhaul favored by some in the community. The County Board approved a series of tweaks to the program's eligibility criteria Saturday (July 14), in a bid to better realize the county's goal of helping older Arlingtonians stay in their homes even as values, and associated tax bills, creep upward. Starting next year, the program will be open to homeowners age 65 or older and people with disabilities, with an annual income of up to $99,472 and household assets — excluding the home itself — up to $400,000, a slight increase from the old $340,000 limit. The county is also now letting people apply for an exemption from 75 percent of their tax bill, when the program previously only let homeowners try for an exemption from their full bill, half of it or a quarter of it. ## County Could Speed Up Design Work on Army Navy Country Club Access Road

County officials seem to have found some money to speed up design work on an access road to link the Arlington View neighborhood to Army Navy Drive. County Manager Mark Schwartz initially proposed some hefty delays for the project, which is set to stretch across a section of the Army Navy Country Club, in his proposed 10-year plan for county construction efforts. Under his proposal, design work on the effort wouldn't even start until fiscal year 2027, with construction set for 2029.

The county's budget challenges have ensured that Arlington officials haven't suddenly found enough money to build the road, and its accompanying bike and pedestrian trails, right away. But county staff did manage to track down about $230,000 to pay for design and engineering work starting in fiscal year 2020, officials told the County Board during a work session Tuesday (July 10). That news is quite welcome for Board members and residents alike, considering that the county has been working to build the 30-foot-wide road since 2010, in order to better connect Columbia Pike to Crystal City.

The road would run from S. Queen Street, near Hoffman-Boston Elementary, to the I-395 underpass, where a country club access road meets up with Army Navy Drive. The process of securing an easement to even cross the country club in the first place was a challenging one for the county, but the two sides ultimately struck a deal after the county agreed to allow the club to build a larger clubhouse than county zoning rules would ordinarily permit. ## These Cities Have the Best Public Park Systems in the Country

Time Magazine touts Arlington as the third best public park system in the Country. Do you live within a 10 minute walk of a park? The answer is yes for nearly all residents of Minneapolis and St. Paul, helping to place Minnesota's twin cities atop The Trust for Public Land's ranking of America's best park systems within the 100 most populous cities. Next up are Washington, D.C. and neighboring Arlington, Va., which boast high investment in parks and easy access for 98 percent of residents. See the online article here.

The print edition (August 6-13) took the theme even further. Jamie Ducharme wrote, "Maybe the best strategy of all is making exercise so ingrained in daily life that it becomes automatic, says Sagar Shah, the planning and community-health center manager at the American Planning Association. Take Arlington, Va., which topped the American College of Sports Medicine's 2018 American Fitness Index rankings in part because of its exemplary funding for and access to parks, paths, and green spaces. Thanks to 49 miles of safe paths, Arlington households make three times more trips by foot, bike or transit than other households in the region, according to a report from the county's transportation and development department.

"But Arlington is a wealthy suburb: areas historically populated by lower-income and minority groups tend to be less likely than average to get enough exercise. They may also lack the funds necessary to make exercise easier."

Other Issues

Virginia to begin issuing driver's licenses that will be required for air travel in 2020

Virginia will begin issuing a new driver's license this fall, putting the commonwealth in compliance with a federal law passed after the Sept. 11 attacks designed to tighten security requirements for state-issued identification. In the next two years, Virginia will replace as many as 2.7 million driver's licenses — a massive undertaking likely to result in longer lines and wait times at Department of Motor Vehicles offices. Virginia is one of several states scrambling to comply with the 2005 domestic security program known as Real ID, which is intended to prevent identity fraud. The program calls for issuing more-secure licenses and identification cards.

Residents of the state are not required to get Real ID, but starting on Oct. 1, 2020, those who travel by air and visit federal facilities such as military bases will need it or another form of identification such as a U.S. passport or a military ID. In Virginia, for example, current license holders will be required to present two proofs of residency, instead of one, and a Social Security card, instead of just providing the number. Virginia transportation officials are already urging license holders to gather up the documentation they will need to obtain the new ID so they can avoid multiple DMV visits. Unless their license is due for renewal, officials are urging customers to wait a few months to get the Real ID. Read more here.

Living History Military Timeline at the Ball-Sellers House in Arlington

On Saturday, August 4, the Arlington Historical Society is hosting a Living History Military Timeline representing the military service of all the residents of the oldest house in the county, the Ball-Sellers House built around 1742. We hope you and the members of your community and civic organizations will help spread the word about this uniquely Arlington event. Visitors will get to meet military re-enactors from the French and Indian War through World War I. This rare opportunity will have fun things for all ages, from learning about what soldiers wore, the gear they carried, and the weapons they used to learning about the role that each person of the house had in military service to our country. Here are just a few examples of what visitors can see and do:

You'll meet "Matthew Brady," the early photographer who captured so many iconic images of the Civil War and had a "photographic salon" in what is now Ballston. You'll be able to pose for a "Brady tin type" photo in costume. You can sign up to be a doughboy and learn what to expect during World War I from a soldier who has "been over there." A member of the Virginia militia who trained for service in the Revolutionary War will help train you to be the quality soldier that General George Washington expects from his neighbors. and lots more to see, do, and learn!

The Ball-Sellers House is located at 5620 3rd Street, South in Arlington's Glencarlyn neighborhood, just off Carlin Springs Road, south of Arlington Boulevard. The event will be from 1:00 to 4:30 pm. For more information, please email

Attention Amazon: Greater Washington ranks as the third best market for tech talent, CBRE report finds

Here's another notch for Greater Washington's HQ2 belt. A CBRE report has ranked the region the third best market for tech talent, providing further evidence that its three shortlisted bids for Amazon's second headquarters — D.C., Northern Virginia and Montgomery County — are potentially strong contenders. The report underscored Greater Washington's growth in the number of tech graduates and the size of its labor pool as two key areas where the region distinguishes itself. It comes one year after Cushman & Wakefield also ranked D.C. as one of the nation's top three tech towns. Greater Washington was ranked second among 50 markets with 10,526 annual tech graduates, a 45 percent increase over the past five years. The region's tech labor pool of 248,150 attributes to 8 percent of its total employment compared to a national average of 3.5 percent. Read more here.

GW Parkway Lane Closures Start Due to Bridge Repairs

The National Park Service is warning drivers about severe traffic backups on the GW Parkway starting July 30 (Monday) and running through the fall, as rehab work on the Windy Run Bridge gets going. Workers have spent the last few weeks removing guard rails and center curbs, as well as doing some paving work, in order to prepare for work on the bridge, located in northeast Arlington near the Woodmont and Riverwood neighborhoods. Starting July 30, the NPS plans to reduce the parkway from four lanes down to three, and expects to:

- Lower the work zone speed limit to 35 miles per hour
  - Direct all traffic into three narrow travel lanes
  - Shift travel lanes to accommodate rush hour traffic
- The NPS plans to always keep one lane open in each direction, reversing the third lane as needed to match the direction of traffic in the morning and evening rush hours on weekdays. Read more here.
